DID YOU KNOW?

Behavioral Health homebound criteria differs from medical homebound criteria. No physical limitations are required.

Homebound criteria applied to psychiatric patients:

*Illness is manifested by a refusal to leave the home (e.g., severe depression, paranoia, agoraphobia, panic attacks, severe anxiety).

*Due to illness it would be unsafe for the patient to leave the home (e.g., hallucinations, violent outbursts, delusions, socially inappropriate behavior).

*Patient is blind or senile and requires assistance in leaving the home (includes patient with dementia who the physician deems is unsafe to be outside of home without supervision).

Also, homebound status is NOT affected by frequent absences from the home to receive therapeutic, psychosocial or medical treatment that can't be provided in the home (adult day care, group therapy, etc.).
